If you need an external charger, this is the place to go. This company has chargers for every situation.

I received one of their great products at CES and am using it right now to charge my iPhone6. It is about as simple as a device like this can get. It's called the Amp Prong+.

It is an external battery in compact form. It's only about 1" by 2 1/4" by 4" and weighs only one-half pound.

The name tells you how it's charged – you just plug it into a wall socket. It has plenty of charge capability, with its 6700 mAh Lithium-Ion battery.

It has two USB ports that can be used simultaneously to charge smartphones, tablets or just about anything else.

It has the two collapsible prongs for charging its internal battery.

There is a silver button on the side, which turns on the four LEDs to show the degree of charge.

And that's it! It's very compact, able to fit into a pocket or purse or to slip into your car's glove compartment.
